

4,000 CHILDREN ARE EVENING WORLD'S GUESTS AT "MOVIE"

moving picture of "Snow White" was set for them. The Strand Theatre never held a more appreciative audience. President Marks said so, and so did Manager Edel. It was a little after 10 o'clock in the morning when "Snow White" presented herself and Marguerite Clark would have been delighted to have received personally the ovation she got in the picture. The charming little actress made many friends among the public school children of New York, if she didn't have them before her.

Miss Sophie Irene Loeb had the show stopped when it was about half over, apologizing for her interruption of the "kiddies" pastime, but said

Why Not Have Real Good Hair

Cuticura Will Surely Help You

If you have dandruff your hair will be dry and thin. Try one treatment with Cuticura. Rub spots of dandruff with Ointment. Next morning shampoo with Soap. Sample Each Free by Mail. Run slip back on the card. Address your order to Cuticura, Dept. 37, Boston. Sold everywhere.

that she wanted to introduce Mr. Lewisohn, who, she was sure, they would be glad to hear. She said The Evening World had left nothing undone, in her belief, to make the day a happy one for the children. She was interrupted with cheers and shouts and whistling.

MR. LEWISOHN ONE OF BEST FRIENDS OF PENNY LUNCH. She said Mr. Lewisohn was one of the very best friends The Evening World had when it was making its fight for the penny lunches in the public schools.

Miss Loeb got quite a hand herself from the children. Mr. Lewisohn was embarrassed at the wealth of plaudits he received. The children clapped their hands, stood up and cheered and "hoo-rayed" for him. The band played and there couldn't have been a bigger ovation tendered him if he were the principal speaker in a big political meeting.

He said he wouldn't keep the "kiddies" long from their entertainment. He told the youngsters how glad he was to be with them on the occasion and that he hoped they enjoyed The Evening World's treat as much as he was enjoying it. It was a fine way to enjoy a day, he said, and he hoped that they would all live to be good citizens, as he was sure they would be, and would stop up wishing the boys and girls all a happy New Year.

A BOX OF CANDY FOR EVERY PUPIL PRESENT. They shouted back to him that they would be in the same. Miss Evelyn M. Goldsmith of the Studio Home, who chaperoned the crippled children for The Evening World, had a few words to say. She told the little ones that there was a box of candy for every pupil, and that those who had not received one would get one as they were going out if they would only hold up their hands. She said that The Evening World wanted this especially done and there were more cheers for Miss Goldsmith and The Evening World.

When the big little audience had suffered and shed tears over the death of Princess "Snow White" and had laughed and cheered when she came back to life and into her own station, with her beloved prince, Miss Loeb asked them to sing "America." Miss Gracie led the children in the song and they gave it with a will.

Then Miss Loeb asked that everybody be especially careful in going out, so that they wouldn't crowd or hurt the crippled children. And it was all over.

Princess "Snow White," her dwarfs and her Prince and big Huntsman had vanished like the fables of old and the audience of little people stood up and cheered to their hearts' content at their entertainment. The band was playing on the sidewalk when the children came out, and there were a lot of big, real policemen to keep the crowds back.

Not a thing had occurred to mar the enjoyment of the little ones. Many teachers were there to help in their care, and the day and its celebration was a perfect occasion and home of young hearts were made really, truly happy.
